Drawing upon his deep knowledge of Native American law, including his unique insights into the federal government's relations with tribal nations, Daniel serves as a trusted advisor to his clients in a wide array of transactional and litigation matters.

Daniel focuses on advising clients in matters involving federal Indian law, Tribal law, renewable and nonrenewable energy, and federal regulatory compliance. He has extensive experience in litigation matters in federal, Tribal and state courts, including cases of first impression in federal appellate and tribal supreme courts.

Daniel also represents clients in administrative appeals, such as cases before the Interior Board of Indian Appeals, and in alternative dispute proceedings.

Demonstrating his broad expertise working with tribes, Daniel uniquely serves as the Attorney General for two federally recognized Indian tribes in Oklahoma. His expertise includes tribal sovereign rights, economic development, jurisdictional disputes, commercial transactions, casino financing, treaty rights, energy development, real estate, and government contracting.

He previously served as counsel for the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs where he worked on landmark federal legislation, such as VAWA and the HEARTH Act, with a particular focus on natural resource development on federal and Indian
