Foster Garvey is pleased to welcome Jennifer Gray, who has joined the firm's Litigation practice as Of Counsel.

Jennifer is a seasoned financial services industry attorney with several years of experience at national law firms and as in-house counsel at large financial institutions. Jennifer represents banks, investors, originators, loan servicers and other institutions in federal and state court litigation involving financial services and residential real estate.

Jennifer regularly defends clients in consumer class actions and individual actions asserting violations of state and federal consumer protection laws. In addition to handling consumer finance litigation, Jennifer has represented clients in commercial disputes, including antitrust actions and investigations, business-to-business contract disputes, and insurance coverage matters.

"Her unique skill set and in-house perspectives add another dimension to our service offering for clients," said Tim Filer, co-leader of Foster Garvey's Litigation group. "We are excited to have Jennifer be part of our firm's continued strategic growth and expansion into the future."

Jennifer joins us from Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP where she was a partner in the Consumer Financial Services practice in its Downtown Los Angeles office. Prior to private practice, Jennifer held senior in-house litigation roles with major financial institutions, including OneWest Bank N.A. and JPMorgan Chase & Co.

She obtained her J.D. from Rutgers Law School and her B.A. in Economics from Rutgers University-New Brunswick.
