

Josh Bloomgarden Quoted in Urban Plains on Value of NFTs in Crypto Marketplace

Media Mention
April 28, 2021
Urban Plains

With all the buzz around NFTs, also known as non-fungible tokens, Urban Plains turned to Foster Garvey's Joshua Bloomgarden to learn more about the digital art phenomenon.

From digital artworks and music files to film clips and even Tweets, an NFT can be anything and these cryptocurrency assets have become widely popular. Recently, a JPG file on the Ethereum-blockchain was reported to have sold for $69 million in March 2021. Part of what makes NFTs so valuable is because they are one-of-a-kind and cannot be traded.

"An NFT is really no different than a baseball card," Bloomgarden explained. "The unique thing about an NFT is that once they're in the blockchain, they can't be changed and for that reason are incredibly useful in proving authenticity."

To read the full article, visit the Urban Plains website.

Contact

Joshua A. Bloomgarden

Related Services

Business & Corporate
Finance

Commercial & IP
Transactions

IP & Technology

Securities & Finance

Sports, Arts & Entertainment