

"Contracts and Force Majeure," TransDigest, Volume XXV, Issue No. 265

Publication
March 2020
TransDigest

Published by the Transportation & Logistics Council, Inc.

The global coronavirus pandemic is disrupting industry on an enormous scale, and its effects are likely to be significant and long-lasting. Under the swiftly evolving conditions created by the outbreak, many transportation service providers and consumers find themselves unable to meet their contractual obligations to business partners, or learn that their business partners are unable to perform contractual duties owed to them. Such businesses are turning to their contracts in search of provisions that might excuse breaches of contract under these circumstances.

To read the full article, click here.

Contact

Kelly A. Mennemeier

Related Services

Transportation & Logistics