John W. Kaveney, a partner in the firm's Healthcare Department, will be on the faculty for the live webcast "Regulatory Developments in the Healthcare Industry: What's New and What Lies Ahead." The program will be presented on Tuesday, September 13, 2022 from 12:00 pm to 1:00 pm (ET) by the Knowledge Group.

Health systems have rapidly evolved to adopt convenient, virtual, and customer-centered care services. The goal is to leverage technologies, such as remote patient monitoring (RPM), artificial intelligence (AI)-based processes, and machine learning to aid in smoother and more streamlined healthcare delivery. However, the adoption of digital transformation requires a proper regulatory framework, particularly in monitoring and evaluating results. While these innovations bring more convenience in delivering healthcare services, they also raise issues on data privacy and health equity. Thus, policymakers are considering stricter regulations to ensure the quality of care.

This program will provide a comprehensive overview of the recent regulatory developments in the healthcare sector, offering best practices in developing and implementing corporate policies to ensure compliance.

Key issues that will be covered in this presentation include:

- Healthcare Regulatory Developments
- Leveraging Technology in the Healthcare Sector: Legal Implications
- Challenges and Critical Issues
- Explore Compliance Strategies
- What Lies Ahead
