January 2017

Real estate taxes can take a substantial bite out of the cash flow of New Jersey's commercial, industrial and multi-family properties, comprising a significant component of the costs of operation or occupancy. Many owners face other challenges to their bottom line precipitated by factors such as lower rental incomes and higher vacancy rates. Others may face property value issues resulting from the existence of environmental contamination.

Unlike many of such factors, the assessments on which real estate taxes are based can be challenged if inappropriate. However, property owners who wish to consider an appeal of their 2017 property tax assessment have a limited window of time to act.

FAQs and Important Dates

Notice of Assessment: Local assessors are required to notify each taxpayer by mail of their 2017 assessment on or before February 1, 2017.

How Assessments Are Calculated: If the municipality has conducted a municipal-wide revaluation or reassessment, the assessment will be in the amount of the assessor's estimate of the market value of the property (the so-called "true value") as of October 1, 2016. Otherwise, the assessment will be in the amount of the assessor's estimate of the market value of the property as of October 1, 2016, adjusted by the average ratio of the assessed value to the market value of other properties in the municipality. This average ratio is determined by the State Director of Taxation. In considering an appeal, property owners need to determine the true value of the property reflected in the assessment to ascertain whether there is a basis for a tax appeal.

Filing an Appeal: An appeal from the 2017 assessment must be filed on or before April 1, 2017; however, if the assessment is the result of a municipal-wide revaluation or reassessment, the appeal deadline is extended to May 1, 2017.

Appeals are filed with the County Board of Taxation, except in instances where the assessment exceeds $1,000,000, in which case an appeal can be filed directly with the New Jersey Tax Court.

The Appeals Process and Sample Outcomes

The Tax Court rules mandate that parties must participate in a settlement conference, and, in fact, most tax appeals do settle. Examples of past settlements in which the firm represented the owners of various types of properties include:

- The assessment of a vacant office building was reduced by 53% from $16,110,000 to $7,519,200.
- The assessment of a 130,000 square foot office building was reduced by 47%, from $5,900,000 to $3,119,800.
- The assessment of 288 condominium units was reduced by 46% from $121,395,500 to $65,464,000.
- The assessment of a 197,000 square foot industrial building was reduced by 26% from $4,400,000 to $3,227,200.
- The assessment of a hotel/office building was reduced by 22%, from $12,458,100 to $9,672,000.
- The assessment of a multi-tenanted warehouse/self storage facility with 21,000 square feet was reduced by 18% from $1,523,700 to $1,250,000.
- The assessment of a shopping center with a total area of 57,500 square feet was reduced by 14% from $6,513,400 to $5,600,000.
- The assessment of a 93-unit cooperative was reduced by 13% from $10,320,000 to $8,900,000.
- The assessment of a 240-unit garden apartment complex was reduced by 12% from $19,230,700 to $16,800,000.
- The assessment of a 190-room hotel was reduced by 8% from $4,994,000 to $4,594,000.

On occasion, the difference between the property owner's estimate of market value and that of the town cannot be reconciled. In those cases, formal appraisals are exchanged and the parties prepare for trial. Over the years, the firm has garnered substantial assessment reductions and tax refunds when representing property owners in trials before County Tax Boards and the Tax Court.
