

JANE BELLO BURKE

Administrative and Regulatory Practice Group Leader

jbburke@hodgsonruss.com 518.433.2404

Jane counsels hospitals, health systems, physician groups, skilled nursing facilities, assisted living facilities, home care agencies and other health care practitioners and providers on a broad range of regulatory, reimbursement, transactional, litigation and compliance matters. She helps providers navigate the complex network of health care laws and regulations so they can focus on what they do best: providing care and services to the individuals they serve.

Jane advises on hospital-physician affiliation and integration issues, including physician recruitment and joint ventures. She is at the forefront of the developing law of telehealth in New York. Jane provides guidance on the Stark Law, the Anti-Kickback Statute and the corporate practice of medicine doctrine. She represents providers in controversies before federal and state agencies, including the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) and the New York State Department of Health (DOH), and in audits, investigations and appeals involving the New York State Office of the Medicaid Inspector General (OMIG).

Some recent examples of matters handled include:

- assisted a New York State-based academic hospital system client on a variety of reimbursement and compliance issues, including matters before the federal Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB) and OMIG
- counseled a broad array of clients (including a health system, skilled nursing facilities, a school district and physicians) on the rapidly emerging law of telehealth
- advised health care provider clients in federal and state litigation, including Article 78 challenges to governmental authority
- counseled nursing home clients in overturning nursing home immediate jeopardy citations through administrative challenges before the Departmental Appeals Board (DAB) of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

Experience

Below are specific examples of some of the work Jane has performed for her clients:

Jane has assisted SNFs in their successful challenges to immediate jeopardy deficiencies relating to compliance with abuse reporting and prevention, accident prevention, infection control, and many other regulatory requirements. In these cases, Jane assists the client in evaluating survey findings, pursuing informal dispute resolution, and filing administrative appeals before the DAB (Departmental Appeals Board). Through these appeals, Jane has succeeded in convincing CMS to reduce the scope and severity of challenged deficiencies below the immediate jeopardy level in numerous cases, which has enabled the SNFs to restore their good names in the communities they serve.

Jane has worked with hospitals, nursing homes, assisted living programs, licensed home care services agencies and other Medicaid providers to challenge OMIG audits. In many cases, these challenges have led to substantial reductions in the amount of the claimed disallowances and, in some cases, the withdrawal of the audits in their entirety.

Jane Bello Burke and a team of Hodgson Russ attorneys obtained an important victory for a major New York health care system, after PHHPC (the Public Health and Health Planning Council) proposed to disapprove a CON (certificate of need) application to operate an ambulatory surgery center. Following an evidentiary hearing, the administrative law judge issued a strongly worded opinion rejecting a competing health care system's opposition, which he concluded was driven by self-interest, was exaggerated, and did not form a sound basis for decision. As a result of the successful challenge, the ambulatory surgery center is up and running, providing needed services to the community.

Our client, a skilled nursing facility, was the subject of a survey alleging deficient practices at the immediate jeopardy level. We assisted the client in evaluating the survey findings and filing an administrative appeal before the Departmental Appeals Board of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Through the appeal, we convinced the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to eliminate one of the immediate jeopardy deficiencies and to reduce the scope and/or severity of the other immediate jeopardy deficiencies. This significantly ameliorated the adverse effects of the survey findings and assisted the facility in restoring its good name in the community.

A team of Hodgson Russ attorneys achieved a speedy and successful resolution for a clinical laboratory with an Article 78 proceeding against DOH and OMIG, which had denied the laboratory's application to enroll as a Medicaid provider on the basis of an unpublished DOH laboratory density policy. Our client brought suit, and OMIG and DOH offered to settle the matter, on the strength of the submissions and without filing a response, by approving our client's application for enrollment in the Medicaid program. Due to the team's successful efforts, the client may now offer its important laboratory services to practitioners serving Medicaid recipients in New York.

A health care client came to the firm after learning that its Medicare billing privileges had been permanently suspended for a five-month period for technical reporting errors unrelated to patient care quality. As a result, the client faced losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in reimbursements for health care services that it had already provided to patients. A team of Hodgson Russ attorneys, including Josh Feinstein, Roopa Chakkappan, and Kate Tiskus (and with guidance from Jane Bello Burke), rolled up their sleeves and dove into the highly technical and arcane rules governing Medicare reimbursement. Ultimately, they persuaded the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services that its regulations were being misapplied. The agency therefore reconsidered the determination and ordered the client's billing privileges to be reinstated in full - resulting in one very relieved client.

Jane Bello Burke assisted three child care providers in their successful challenge to placement on the New York Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment following a child's allergic reaction to an unknown causative agent at a day care center. The successful challenge enabled the child care providers to continue to pursue their chosen careers.

A Hodgson Russ team led by Jane Bello Burke and Michelle Merola obtained an important victory for a major New York health care system, after the PHHPC (the Public Health and Health Planning Council) proposed to disapprove a CON (certificate of need) to operate an ASC (ambulatory surgery center). A competing health care system vigorously opposed the application, arguing that there was no "public need" for the ASC - one of the statutory prerequisites for the issuance of a CON. Following a six-day hearing, the administrative law judge issued a strongly worded opinion rejecting the competing health care system's opposition, which he concluded was driven by self-interest, was exaggerated, and did not form a sound basis for decision, and recommending approval of the ASC. As a result of the successful challenge, the ambulatory center is up and running, providing needed services to the community.

Hodgson Russ has represented counties and local industrial development agencies in the restructuring of the provision of public nursing home services. In several situations, the restructuring involved the transfer of the nursing home from the local county to a private owner and operator. In one situation, we formed a local development corporation controlled by the local county to operate the local nursing home.
