Joseph is a seasoned litigator and former prosecutor with significant jury trial experience. His current work focuses primarily on the areas of personal injury; toxic tort; public utility work; and commercial, business, environmental, discrimination, and white-collar criminal defense litigation.

Joe's litigation experience includes the defense of clients accused of violating environmental laws, committing bankruptcy or Medicaid fraud, or tax evasion. He has represented suppliers, product manufacturers, and premises owners in property damage and personal injury matters involving various hazardous substances, including, but not limited to, chemical products and asbestos.

In his employment practice, Joe has handled discrimination cases in various forums including the EEOC, New York State Division of Human Rights, as well as state and federal courts.

In addition, Joe counseled clients in investigations and actions conducted or brought by state and federal authorities including the New York State Attorney General's Office, O.S.H.A., United States Justice Department, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal and State Bureaus of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco, Internal Revenue Service, as well as various District Attorney's offices.

Joe has also represented corporations, individuals, and utilities and has handled cases involving negligence, labor law, product liability, and wrongful death arising out of electrocution and drowning. He also has represented clients in personal injury, wrongful death, and property damage claims arising out of natural gas explosions.
