included regular interaction with government agency representatives, the client, and the engaged third-party consultants in managing compliance with all applicable obligations.

Hodgson Russ has represented major industrial manufacturers in transferring environmental liabilities and related legal exposures and obligations to financially sound third parties for a fixed sum. In such cases, the client has monetized the large and uncertain risks arising from the need to remediate legacy contamination and the associated tort, reuse, and redevelopment risks. Each transfer involved the use of sophisticated environmental insurance products and other risk transfer assessments, allowed the client to remove the reserves established for those liabilities and exposures, and ultimately resulted in the successful redevelopment of the contaminated property.

Hodgson Russ represents a private manufacturer of raw materials against claims asserted by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regarding various environmental requirements and statutes.

A victory in federal court by a team of Hodgson Russ attorneys put an end to a seven-year lawsuit and extinguished the risk of our client paying millions in damages and other costs arising from claims of federal and state environmental law violations. The matter involved a facility owned and operated by our client, a manufacturer. Over the course of decades of operation, our client's facility became heavily contaminated with chemical residues. Some of those residues migrated off site into the surrounding community. Hodgson Russ represented this manufacturer in connection with an administrative order on consent entered into with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the State Department of Environmental Conservation under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA). Our client is performing the work required by the administrative order and is making extensive efforts to benefit the community. Despite our client's efforts, four families from the surrounding community sued the manufacturer in federal court under the citizen suit provisions of several federal statutes, claiming that our client was not complying with the requirements of various environmental statutes and that EPA was not effectively enforcing them. The families asked the federal court to intervene and to order our client to do more remediation faster. They also asserted claims for personal injury and property damage. The Hodgson Russ team successfully defeated the plaintiffs' claims in court. In his decision, the presiding judge granted our motion to disqualify the plaintiffs' expert and for summary judgment. The case was dismissed entirely — freeing our client to focus on completing the corrective action program without judicial intervention and to remove a substantial liability reserve from its books. Subsequent efforts by the plaintiffs to revive the suit have also been defeated.

Hodgson Russ represented a Fortune 1000 company in the acquisition of the interests and real property of a privately held specialty parts manufacturer with locations on four continents. Our responsibilities included environmental due diligence review, the management of various environmental consultants, risk analyses related to various acquired properties, and contract drafting and negotiation.

Hodgson Russ represented a premier U.S. hardwood lumber company in its acquisition of a privately held hardwood company with 11 saw mills in four mid-Atlantic and southern states. The acquisition involved extensive environmental, real estate, tax, and zoning issues at all locations. Our attorneys successfully structured the complex deal, including determining the type of purchase to pursue and its implementation. This acquisition required the client to obtain a new credit facility to finance the transaction. For this same client, Hodgson Russ performs five to six acquisitions of varying size and complexity every year. with the sale of the company to a large private-equity fund. The transition included the sale in both the U.S. and Europe and included the use of representation and warranty insurance in connection with the purchase agreement.

Hodgson Russ represented a large, multinational wood treatment corporation in its sale to certain funds managed by a large global investment private equity fund. Responsibilities included overseeing seller-side environmental due diligence, the management of various environmental consultants, contract drafting and negotiation, and other related responsibilities.
