State & Local Tax

One of the most commonly asked tax question we've all received over the past few months goes something like this: "I have not been in New York City since March 2020. Can I avoid New York City taxes this year?" In this session, Tim Noonan tries to answer this question, looking at a variety of different factual scenarios and circumstances. He'll also cover ancillary issues around the application of New York's telecommuting rules for nonresidents working remotely from out-of-state locations.
