Hodgson Russ attorneys Jodyann Galvin and John D. Lopinski were speakers at the 2011 annual meeting of the Association of University Technology Managers (AUTM) in Las Vegas. Hodgson Russ was a sponsor of the conference.

Jody was a speaker and John served as moderator of the CLE session “Joint Inventor or Not: Equitable Entitlement as a Measure to Protect Ownership in Patent Rights,” which addressed a number of legal challenges faced by universities when faculty members collaborate with colleagues either inside or outside their institutions on an invention. Jody, John, and co-presenter William Hopewell from Cornell University focused on joint inventorship and provided practical steps universities can take to protect themselves, their faculty members, and intellectual property rights.
