

COMMUNITY

For nearly 200 years, Hodgson Russ has had a philosophy and tradition of giving generously of our time, talent, and finances to the communities we serve. Our attorneys and staff serve on the boards of directors of more than 100 organizations, including those devoted to health care, education, the arts, civic and business interests, and social issues. At all levels, we encourage attorneys and staff to support community organizations with their time, skills, and passion. In addition to the hours we devote to charities, the firm is pleased to provide financial support to more than 250 worthy organizations.

Hodgson Russ is also committed to providing legal services pro bono to individuals and organizations in need, and we are honored to be recognized for these efforts. The firm has received the New York State Bar Association President's Pro Bono Award, as well as honors from the Washington, D.C.-based Legal Services Corporation for commitment to providing pro bono legal services in New York State, the Erie County Bar Association for the firm's outstanding pro bono efforts, and the U.S. District Court for the Western District of New York for dedication to pro bono activities.

For more information on Hodgson Russ's charitable giving process, please contact:

- Jodyann Galvin
- Catherine Eberl
- William Ciszewski