

New Illinois job 'interview bot' A.I. law could boost lawsuit risks for employers

John Breslin
Cook County Record
08.01.2019

Attorneys

Peter J. Gillespie

Practice Areas

Counseling and Transactional

Labor Management Relations

Private and Public Sector Employment Litigation

CHICAGO – Illinois has jumped out ahead of the rest of the country on regulating the use of artificial intelligence in job interviews, and that could open employers up to new legal problems, as well, an attorney with expertise on technology law said.

The Illinois General Assembly recently passed the Artifical Intelligence Video Interview Act, which introduces disclosure and consent rules for employers using A.I. in the hiring process. Under the legislation, not yet signed by Gov. J.B Pritzker, employers must tell applicants that A.I. video technology may be used to select candidates, explain how A.I. works and obtain consent.

New Illinois job 'interview bot' A.I. law could boost lawsuit risks for employers