Overview

As a health care attorney Guy (He/Him) learns as much from his clients as they learn from him. He enjoys getting to know their practice and the nature of their work, and they appreciate that he guides them through complicated processes that arise in their profession.

Guy defends physicians, nurses and hospitals in medical malpractice claims. He sees his clients through Indiana's medical review panel process in state court. In addition to his experience as a medical malpractice defense attorney, Guy often assists clients in responding to patient inquiries, responding to requests for medical records, and preparing his clients' employees for deposition or testimony by conducting mock direct and cross-examinations. He also helps his clients navigate and comply with HIPAA when responding to requests for protected health information.
