This concern is now magnified in light of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission Emergency Rule declaring that any COVID-19 injury or incapacitation suffered by certain workers will be "rebuttably presumed to have arisen out of and in the course of employment" and to be "causally connected" to the hazards and exposures of the worker's employment.

Join partners Jeff Risch and Matt Horn of Amundsen Davis and Mark Denzler, CEO & President of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association on Tuesday, April 28, 2020, as they present the latest on these converging issues and identify proactive measures employers can take now to 1) diminish the spread or transmission of COVID-19 in the workplace per the latest CDC guidelines, 2) create new rules, processes and procedures to implement in order to help reduce work comp claims being filed or successfully pursued, and 3) avoid OSHA violations.
