Amundsen Davis obtained summary judgment in Cook County, IL on behalf of a condominium association and property manager arising out of injuries claimed to have been caused by a defective condition in a doorway. The defendants argued that the plaintiff provided no facts to demonstrate that they knew of the existence of a defective condition. The court found that the plaintiff provided no facts to demonstrate that the defendants knew of the existence of a defective condition or should have known that there was a defective condition. The court, ruling solely on the briefs, issued a written opinion and order granting summary judgment in favor of the defendants.
