

Reporting Best Practices: Making Your Client Look Good

DRI's The Voice Newsletter
November 14, 2018

The Rules of Professional Conduct require attorneys to keep their clients reasonably informed of developments and strategy in a matter, and to explain issues to the client to make informed decisions. Insurance company clients are no different. Co-author Mike McGory and his client Tracy Steele discuss best reporting practices insurers should consider when communicating with insurance company clients in the Winter edition of DRI's The Voice Newsletter.

PROFESSIONALS

Michael McGory
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

Product Liability