

Climate Change as a National Security Issue

Wiley Podcast

October 1, 2021

On today's episode, Wiley's Tracie Winfrey Howard, Erik Baptist, and Charlotte Bertrand explore President Biden's climate initiatives as they relate to national security. They discuss the Administration's efforts to address climate change through government contracting; how energy sectors will be fundamentally altered; the mitigation and adaptation proposals in the current infrastructure bill; and how certain environmental regulations could actually undermine the Administration's climate change actions.

Related Professionals

Tracie Winfrey Howard
Partner
202.719.7452
trhoward@wiley.law

Practice Areas

Climate Change
Environment & Product Regulation
Government Contracts
National Security